History
The modern-day strawberry, Fragaria Ananassa Dutch, is somewhat of a "rookie" to the agricultural scene. They are the descendants of wild strawberries that have been collected and eaten since as early as 50 A.D., when the Romans used to serve them at banquets. Most North American varieties, including the ones grown here at Marino Lookout Farm, date back to about 1835, when Fragaria Virginiana Dutch and Gragearia Chloensis Linn varieties were cultivated on the East Coast. Another variety that influences modern species was the Pineapple Strawberry, which was developed from imported Chilean berries by French grower Antoine Nicholas Duschense.

Health Benefits
Strawberries are a great source of Vitamin C. In fact, 8 strawberries have more vitamin C than an orange. Strawberries have only 50 calories per serving and no cholesterol or saturated fats. Eight strawberries also provide 20 percent of the suggested daily amount of folic acid.

FUN FACTS

- In 13th Century France, strawberries were cultivated for medicinal uses such as digestion aides, skin tonic's, aching joints, loose teeth, sore throats, bad breath, kidney stones, bruises, and even depression.
- The best strawberries are brightly colored and plump with a strong scent.
- Small berries are usually the sweetest and tastiest!
